Excerpt from Astronomy and Geology Compared Appear in our own eyes; what mere atoms we are, no more permanent than the ?ies which buzz through a summer and then die; no larger than the motes which dance in the sunbeam ! But our second thoughts are more inspiring and consolatory. Is not the fact that we are thus enabled to measure and to comprehend so large a part of this mighty scheme, a proof that we are connected with it by ties more lasting than are at present visible to us? The acts of the Almighty are never purposeless, and the cir cumstance that we are thus permitted a prospect of what is beyond us here, is one evidence, among the many others which are afforded to us, of the truth of those hopes which associate us with a larger future. Not only do these two sciences afford us these prospects beyond the boundaries of this present world, but I think it will be found that they are the only ones which do so. The other sciences, which add so largely to our knowledge of the laws of nature here, and place in our hands such vastly augmented powers over the material world, deal almost exclusively with sublunary matters. Chemistry, Electricity, Anatomy, Botany, and many others, have their relations here. Other sciences borrow, indeed, from Astronomy or.
