Charles Loring Brace (June 19, 1826 in Litchfield, Connecticut - August 11, 1890) was a contributing philanthropist in the field of social reform. He is considered a father of the modern foster care movement and was most renowned for starting the Orphan Train movement of the mid-19th century, and for founding The Children s Aid Society. Brace s mother died when he was 14, and he was raised by his father, a history teacher. He graduated from Yale in 1846 and then went on to study divinity and theology at Yale, but left to study at Union Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1849. He was drawn to New York because it was viewed as the center of American Protestantism and social activity. His best friend, Frederick Law Olmsted, the landscape architect, also lived in New York. On August 21, 1854 he married Letitia Neill in Belfast, Ireland, who proved to be a great support to her husband s social reform efforts. Letitia s father, Robert Neill, was an avid abolitionist and he opened his home to some of the world s most famous anti-slavery orators, including Frederick Douglass.
