Converting Bruce Scene. The living-room of the apartment occupied by Peggy and Beth. It is a charming room, with many evidences of pretty feminine taste. A be-ribboned guitar lies on the couch; a string of dance programs dangle from the chandelier; on the table is an open work-basket, with a bit of fancy-work sticking out of it; a bright-hued bag hangs on the back of a chair. (At rise, Beth is discovered in an easy chair near table, reading and nibbling candy, an open box of which stands on the corner of the table near at hand. Phone rings.)
Beth dropping book, and turning to table on which phone stands, takes down receiver). Hello! Oh, Mr. Webster, is it? She settles herself into her chair as if for a long conversation.)
Good-evening. No, Peggys out. She went over to the cottage to a committee meeting. Wont I do? Oh, he 2. When did he get back? Well, I suppose we shall not see you...
