Brand New Book  Print on Demand .1803; just three years after his life was devastated by the loss of his fiancee, British Navy Lieutenant Neville Burton has returned to greater exploits in Jamaica. His new assignment as Master and Commander of the captured topsail schooner HMS Superieure had been rough so far. The ship s company, drawn from the dregs of the fleet, were only just now pulling together. A mutiny early on had sent the worst of them off to try their hand at being pirates of the Caribbean. Commanding a Royal Navy ship in the Napoleonic War is not Burton s only source of peril, however. His spymaster mentor has pressed on him the investigation of a possible spy. Fate intervenes when he meets the American Chester Stillwater. His grief only now subsiding, he has no intention of seeking an affair of the heart; but he discovers Stillwater s daughter, a beauty with an uncanny resemblance to his lost lover. New romance will not be simple, however. Her disapproving father is the man Neville has been assigned to investigate as a suspected secret agent. Burton s desire to see Marion is first hindered by an irritating competitor who proposes a duel for Marion s honor, and then thwarted by the war-mongering Napoleon. When the Peace of 1802 is cast aside, England s war with France resumes. Neville s ship is ordered to join Admiral Nelson s squadron and return to Europe, and he must drop the games of intrigue and romance to join the war. Pure luck prevails: while Lt. Burton s ship is in London for repairs, he discovers that the headstrong Marion is also there, waiting for her chance to cross the Channel...
