Excerpt from Journal of the New England Water Works Association, Vol. 11: September, 1896, to June, 1897 The large number per cc. In the third jar was no doubt partly caused by greater evaporation from the large surface exposed and the consequent higher concentration of the organisms, but it was chiefly due to the greater opportunity for the absorption of air. In the deep jar the water could not take up the oxygen and carbonic acid from the air as fast as the diatoms used them up. Moreover the diatoms settled to the bottom of the jars, where they grew as a brown, velvety layer. The distance of these growths from the surface also affected their supply of air. Another experiment made at the same time gave similar results. Into three cylinders, equal in diameter, were poured different quantities of the same sample of water. The first contained 100 cc., the second 200 cc., and the third 500 cc., the depths being, respectively, cm., cm., and cm. The original water contained 226 diatoms per cc. After ten days the first jar...
