William Henry Harrison, Late President of the United States, a Member of the National Institution for the Promotion of Science: Delivered Before the Institution; June 24, 1841 His eldest son, Benjamin Harrison, was, during his life, which terminated on the 10th April, 1710, at the early age of thirty-seven years, distinguished in the history of the colony. He was by profession a lawyer, and is represented as eminent for his intelligence, learning, eloquence, and fidelity; the unwearied patron of widows, orphans, and of all the poor and oppressed; the arbiter and pacifier in all controversies and disputes; a most upright judge in all the litigations of the county; the stern avenger of impiety and iniquity, and a zealous promoter of the public good. Dying at Williamsburg while exercising the functions of Speaker of the House of Burgesses, the monument erected to his memory, bearing an inscription in Latin, of which the foregoing summary of his character is the translation of a part, is supposed...
