Copper Canyon Press, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Joudah s poetry thrives on dramatic shifts in perspective, on continually challenging received notions. --The Guardian Emerging in the era of tweets and text messages, poet Fady Joudah has invented a new poetic form: textu. The u in textu echoes the one in haiku, and also emphasizes the intimate you. A textu poem has a single rule: be exactly 160 characters long. As theme, form, and style are wide opened, a textu reveals new possibilities and poetry in unexpected ways. Textu Your spine a river into the forest can t tell the neurons for the trees I light light you up with sound profile threading the image habit of pleasure Conscience When we learn how an infant in the womb Sleeps precisely in a parent s pose say with fist closed pillowing the temple What will become of the poem A collection of poems that takes its form from the text message necessarily raises similar questions about attention, and attendant questions about empathy. Each poem in Fady Joudah s Textu was composed on a smart phone s text message screen, and is exactly 160 characters long, specific to text message parameters. Aren t text messages the epitome of what we glance at in passing, and then just as quickly forget, in that often-described stream of information and stimulation? This book is not a reductive critique of this stream, or what it is doing to us. Neither does the collection let its premise--the textu form--justify itself without inquiry, as though shaping a poem according to the strictures of a text message necessarily makes the poem interesting. Instead, the form feels central to these poems, and to what they are doing. Joudah has pointed out that for most people...
