Forgotten Books, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Duke Divinity School Review, Vol. 37: Internships; Winter, 1972 Basically, however, I chose to spend a year on the overseas mission internship not because it afforded me the opportunity to go some where, but because it allowed me to go to Africa in particular. I contend that considerations about the relevance to my future ministry as a pastor in Mississippi played an important role in my decision to participate in the program. Many areas of Mississippi, the context of my own pastoral work, are more than fifty percent black. It was my desire to have an extended period of contact on a close interpersonal level with men and women of the Negro race. I had black friends in America before I went to Africa, but I also felt that these friendships were formed and nurtured under peculiar circumstances. That is to say, I felt that my relationships with black people were always the result of structured attempts at being friends. A certain spontaneity and genuineness were lacking. Hopefully, the experience in Rhodesia would enable me, having successfully broken...
